

RESEMBLES COLORS

EXCLUSIVELY FROM

In 2014,

Quaker Windows introduced a new group of powder-coat paint colors for our windows and doors - colors that offered the building industry a long-awaited alternative to anodized coatings.

This new set of colors was developed to resemble anodized finishes, thus was born Quaker's "Resembles Colors".

Today, our Resembles colors are some of our most popular choices. Not just because they look like anodized but also because they are a winning solution for builders, developers and architects. Here's why:

- * Resembles painted finishes have double the warranty (10 years vs. 5 for anodized)
- * Much shorter lead times since we paint all aluminum lineals in-house while anodized must be outsourced
- * Better pricing across the board
- * A consistent painted finish for each rail as opposed to the industry-accepted range that comes with the anodizing process.

THE ENVIRONMENTAL CHOICE

As part of our Green initiative at Quaker, we employ only environmentally-friendly powder paint coatings for our aluminum windows and doors. These powder-coatings emit nearly zero VOC's (Volatile Organic Compounds) into the air. Plus, almost all of our over-spray is reclaimed thus eliminating waste.
